Azizi the doll

Writer: Lawrence A. Konjuro
Illustration: Natalie Propa

English

Story Book

Azizi the doll

Writer: Lawrence A. Konjuro
Illustration: Natalie Propa
Reformatted for Bloom By: Cara Ediger

English

Azizi the doll
Writer: Lawrence A. Konjuro
Illustration: Natalie Propa

This story was developed at a workshop held at Kenyatta University, with Kenyatta University students, run by Dr Adelheid Bwire. This book is published in memory of student teacher Lawrence A Konjuro.

Saide, South African Institute for Distance Education
www.africanstorybook.org
A Saide Initiative

This is Azizi.

Azizi is my doll.

I like Azizi because he always smiles.

After I wake up I wash my face.
Then I look for Azizi.

When I find Azizi I brush his hair.

When I eat breakfast I feed Azizi.

When I eat sweets I give one to Azizi.

But Azizi never eats his sweet.
I wonder why!

I walk around the compound picking flowers.

I give a flower to Azizi.
But he never says, “Thank you.”

I wash Azizi clean before my mother bathes me.

I dress Azizi in red because I love the colour red.

When I go to sleep, I lay
Azizi beside me.